

RHAPSODY

A tornado of pigeons carries my soul
Into the blissful heart of the sky
On the back of its ever-beautiful whole.
I stand, pointing as they ask why;
Crying, not for the return of the carried
But for attention to White that's Black married.

Prince Jacon