ISRAEL ANTI-DRUG AUTHORITY

Background

Drug abuse is a global problem. It destroys lives and communities and affects people world wide, in all countries. Drug abuse has devastating social and economic consequences for all members of the community and society. Over the years, it has become clear that the drug problem needs to be addressed both in terms of demand and supply reduction, interconnected issues which must be incorporated as part of an integral drug control strategy.

Governments are increasingly establishing integrated demand and supply reduction approaches and strategies, however, in many cases there is still a lack of coordination between relevant agencies.

Israel would like to share some of its experience in assisting other countries to incorporate demand reduction approaches into their national drug control strategies, while emphasizing the essential need for effective cooperation and coordination between the relevant government ministries and non-governmental entities involved in the battle against drugs.

Since 1988, Israel's drug control efforts have been coordinated by the Israel Anti-Drug Authority (IADA). IADA is a statutory corporation, established by virtue of the "Drug Control Authority Law, 5748-1988". Under IADA's umbrella, professionals in government and non-governmental agencies work together to rid Israel of the plague of drugs. This cooperation and coordination stretches across all areas of drug control, from prevention and treatment, to law enforcement. Key to Israel's drug control strategy is the issue of demand reduction, which is an integral aspect of the national strategy.

Demand reduction is addressed at all levels, with programs ranging from primary prevention programs at schools and at the communities and prevention programs for soldiers at the IDF to harm reduction programs aimed at drug abusers. Programs are based on the belief that different communities and subpopulations have different needs, and all programs are culture and gender sensitive. Israel's diverse population is composed in large by immigrants from all over the world. The various predominant religious and ethnic groups, as well as large immigrant populations from the former Soviet Union and Ethiopia in particular form a very heterogeneous population with vary different backgrounds, cultures and customs. Over the years, Israel has learned to appreciate this diversity and recognizes their individual needs. With this in mind, it has created culture sensitive programs, addressing the needs and characteristics of each group. Treatment and rehabilitation programs are offered to all those harmed by drugs, with the belief that each individual needs a different kind of treatment. Programs include drug substitution methods, detox. centers and residential treatment facilities, and are tailored specifically for all types of subpopulations, ranging from youth to drug abusers in the prison system.

Overall Goals

- To address the specific needs of the participating countries.
- To generate personal commitment among course participants to promote drug control efforts in their countries and communities based on the models developed in Israel.
- To encourage continuing and meaningful partnerships between Israel and the participating delegations, including assistance in the implementation of programs and strategies in their countries.
- To provide an exceptional platform for exchange of knowledge between participants based on their national experiences.

Aims of the Course

To offer participants an in depth overview of Israel's drug control strategy, based on the work done by the Israel Anti-Drug Authority as the principal coordinating body in the field.

To enable participants to learn more in depth about Israel's demand reduction strategy, an integral component of the national drug control strategy, by emphasizing all related issues: prevention, treatment and rehabilitation, community action and more.

To stress the importance of coordination between all agencies involved in the country's drug control strategy.

Course Content

The course will be conducted in the form of lectures and workshops, including group work, interactive teaching, role playing, and other participatory techniques.

Some of the topics which will be dealt with during the course:

- IADA's structure, goals and strategies
- Prevention programs, approaches, theories and policies
- Treatment and rehabilitation programs and policies
- Community development
- Surveys and evaluation methods
- Human resource training

A final and thorough syllabus will be presented later, after an assessment of the participating countries' individual needs.

Aharon Ofri International Training Center and Israel Anti-Drug Authority (IADA)

The belief that sharing knowledge and working together are essential elements in the global war against drugs has led to the strategic partnership between the Israel Anti Drugs Authority and the Center for International Cooperation of the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Both government entities bring to this partnership tremendous experience in the field of teaching and knowledge sharing.

The Ofri Center was established in 1989 as a core extension of MASHAV, the Center for International Cooperation of the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs, in cooperation with the Ministry of Education. The Center's area of expertise is the transmission of knowledge about education, which is essential for the development of civil society.

Adopting the UN's development goals for the new millennium and the world agenda, the Ofri Center has made it its goal to contribute to the sustainable development of human resources internationally, based on knowledge and experience accumulated in Israel.

The Aharon Ofri International Training Center has organized courses and seminars in Israel and in many countries throughout the world, and during the past 18 years has trained more than 4000 alumni who have participated in 200 courses on diverse subjects related to education and community development.

IADA's vast experience in sharing and exchanging knowledge can be attributed to the developing and fostering of relations with countries all over the world. Over the years, IADA has hosted a number of foreign delegations from countries including Croatia, Singapore, Russia, Costa Rica and Romania, who come to Israel to learn about its drug control efforts. Regional cooperation has also been on the rise, and with the assistance of the UNODC's Regional Office in Cairo, IADA has built up its relations with the Palestinian Authority, hosting workshops and study tours. Remarkable efforts have also been made by Jordan and Israel to work together.
